I am pleased to enclose letters of support for the proposed Newlands Wind Farm.

By way of explanation, Green Campaigns offers professional campaigning and public relations services in the fields of environmental protection, environmental sustainability and action to tackle climate change. The company specialises in promoting clean, renewable energy technologies.

Bolsterstone's development philosophy includes wide consultation with the local community through public exhibitions, newsletters, meetings, presentations and information stalls. Green Campaigns has been retained by Bolsterstone to establish and run temporary information stalls in the area close to the Newlands proposal.

We set up an information point on 21st and 22nd July 2008 in the centre of Carlisle to display a wide range of maps and photomontages of the Newlands proposal. Copies of the developer's literature relating to the project, the Environmental Appraisal documents and materials dealing with the issue of wind power in general were also made available.

The nature of the proposal was explained clearly to members of the public who visited the information point. Considerable time was spent answering questions about the Newlands proposal specifically and about wind power in general.

A considerable number of people expressed support for the proposal. Those who did so were invited to write to Carlisle City Council. Supporters had the option to submit their letters individually or to allow Green Campaigns to do so on their behalf. Word processing facilities were also available for people to compose letters and send them under separate cover. (Sincere apologies for the incorrect spelling of your name on some of the letters – this was due to a typographical error in information received by us.)

If you require any further information, please don't hesitate to contact me or my colleague, John Everett.

Yours sincerely

Richard Claxton
